LEARNING TO BEHAVE

Beta, behave yourself’, the mother says, as she bids bye to her son aged seven-and-a half years old, leaving for school. Does this admonition mean anything to us adults? Of course, we try our best to be within the law. We bare our fangs at anything or anyone who crosses our path, when they get our goat. A goat is an animal that was supposed to soothe us. As adults, we care about we look, less about how we behave and more about how much we earn. As citizens, we have to be civic minded, but there is a deeper meaning to our behaviour. Charity starts at home, so does good behaviour. We teach our children the right way to behave by our example. Children are imitators; so, watch out for how you convey them the right attitude in a right way so that they understand the value. Moral groundings have their base at home. This is not a primer to teach your children how to behave. It is all about you. Swami Sri Yukteswar Giri, Guru of Sri Paramahansa Yogananda ji, told him 'Learn to behave'. This was part of the training Sri Paramahansa Yogananda ji received during a period of 10 years from Swami Sri Yukteswar Giri. Later, Yogananda ji
